You're a MASTERMIND!

Your Gift: Turning Knowledge Into Wisdom and Solutions

You have a natural curiosity and a remarkable ability to understand how things work.

As a Mastermind, you're energized by learning, analyzing information, solving problems, and developing expertise. You enjoy getting beneath the surface of an issue to understand what's really happening.

You're thoughtful, conscientious, and often the person others rely on when they need sound judgment or a well-considered solution.

You don't necessarily need to be in the spotlight. You're perfectly comfortable working independently, immersing yourself in something that interests you, and developing a deeper understanding of it.

For you, learning isn't simply a means to an end. It's something you genuinely enjoy.

What Makes You Shine

Your natural strengths may include:

- Analyzing complex situations and identifying solutions.
- Researching, learning, and developing expertise.
- Thinking strategically and anticipating challenges.
- Paying attention to important details.
- Bringing thoughtful, well-informed perspectives to decisions.

When Your Strengths Become Challenges

Your desire to understand things thoroughly can sometimes keep you from moving forward.

You may find yourself researching one more possibility, gathering more information, or waiting until you feel completely prepared.

Perfectionism can creep in, too.

And after a career in which your expertise was valued, retirement may leave you wondering where all that knowledge and experience belong now.

Here's something to consider:

Your wisdom didn't retire when you did. And you don't have to know everything before you begin something new.

Your Zone of Genius in Your Next Chapter

Imagine having the freedom to explore subjects that genuinely interest you—not because they're required for your career, but because they spark your curiosity.

Perhaps you'll research family history, teach a class, mentor someone in your field, develop a new skill, write, consult, or help an organization solve an important problem.

You may discover that your greatest contribution isn't necessarily acquiring more knowledge, but sharing the wisdom you've already gained.

And perhaps God has been preparing you for an opportunity you haven't yet imagined.

A Question to Consider

What knowledge, experience, or wisdom have I accumulated that could benefit someone else—or open the door to something new?

Don't overlook the things that come so naturally to you that you assume everyone else knows them, too.

Your Next Chapter Begins With You

Your Zone of Genius is a starting point, not a destination. Understanding your strengths can help you recognize new possibilities and begin exploring where God may be leading.

Because God isn't finished with you yet.

Trust me. The world needs you.