You're a CHAMPION!

Your Gift: Helping Others Discover Their Potential

You have a heart for people and a natural desire to make a difference.

As a Champion, you're energized by encouraging others, building meaningful relationships, and contributing to something larger than yourself.

You have a gift for recognizing the strengths and potential in people—sometimes before they recognize those qualities in themselves.

You're often the person who listens, encourages, connects, and quietly helps others succeed.

You don't necessarily need recognition or a leadership title. What matters most is knowing that your presence and contributions have made a positive difference.

For you, fulfillment often comes through relationships, shared experiences, and meaningful service.

What Makes You Shine

Your natural strengths may include:

- Encouraging others and recognizing their potential.
- Building trust and meaningful relationships.
- Bringing people together around shared values.
- Listening with empathy and understanding.
- Supporting causes and people you believe in.

When Your Strengths Become Challenges

Your desire to help others can sometimes make it difficult to establish boundaries.

You may put other people's needs ahead of your own, avoid difficult conversations, or hesitate to pursue something new if it involves uncertainty or conflict.

And after years of being needed by colleagues, family members, or an organization, retirement may leave you wondering where you fit.

But consider this:

Your value has never depended on how many people need you. Your compassion, wisdom, and presence are gifts in themselves.

Your Zone of Genius in Your Next Chapter

There are countless ways to make a meaningful difference without returning to the responsibilities of your former career.

Perhaps you'll mentor younger women, volunteer for a cause close to your heart, support a ministry, strengthen relationships, advocate for something you believe in, or help build a sense of community.

You may also discover that this season offers an opportunity to nurture your own interests and dreams.

Being a Champion doesn't mean you must always be doing something for someone else.

Sometimes God invites us to grow and receive, not simply give.

A Question to Consider

Who or what am I naturally drawn to encourage, support, or champion—and how might I do that in a way that also brings joy and fulfillment to my own life?

Pay attention to the people and causes that stir your heart. They may offer clues about what comes next.

Your Next Chapter Begins With You

Your Zone of Genius is a starting point, not a destination. Understanding your strengths can help you recognize new possibilities and begin exploring where God may be leading.

Because God isn't finished with you yet.

Trust me. The world needs you.
