You're a CREATOR!

Your Gift: Seeing Possibilities Others Haven't Imagined

You see the world through a lens of possibility.

As a Creator, you're naturally drawn to new ideas, fresh approaches, and opportunities to bring something meaningful into existence.

You may express your creativity through art, writing, music, design, entrepreneurship, problem-solving, or simply finding a better way to do something.

Creativity isn't limited to artistic talent. It's the ability to imagine what doesn't yet exist—and find ways to make it real.

You're often independent, resourceful, and motivated by work that reflects your values and personal vision.

You enjoy the freedom to experiment, explore, and follow your curiosity.

What Makes You Shine

Your natural strengths may include:

- Imagining new possibilities and original ideas.
- Finding innovative solutions to familiar problems.
- Expressing ideas through creative projects.
- Recognizing opportunities others may overlook.
- Bringing passion, imagination, and resourcefulness to what you do.

When Your Strengths Become Challenges

With so many ideas and possibilities, you may struggle to decide which ones deserve your attention.

You might begin several projects at once, become frustrated by limitations, or place enormous pressure on yourself to make everything turn out exactly as you imagined.

And if your professional career left little room for creative expression, you may have set aside interests and talents that once brought you tremendous joy.

Here's something worth remembering:

Not everything you create needs to become a business, accomplish a goal, or impress someone else. Sometimes the joy of creating is enough.

Your Zone of Genius in Your Next Chapter

Retirement may offer something you've been missing for years: the freedom to explore.

Perhaps you'll return to a creative interest you abandoned long ago. Maybe you'll write a book, develop a product, start a business, pursue an artistic passion, or bring an entirely new idea to life.

Or perhaps your creativity will find expression in the way you serve others, solve problems, or contribute to your community.

The possibilities are nearly endless.

And as you explore them, you may discover that God has placed gifts within you that have been waiting for this very season.

A Question to Consider

What have I always wanted to create, explore, or bring to life—but haven't yet given myself permission to pursue?

You don't need to know where the idea will lead. Sometimes the first step is simply giving yourself permission to begin.

Your Next Chapter Begins With You

Your Zone of Genius is a starting point, not a destination. Understanding your strengths can help you recognize new possibilities and begin exploring where God may be leading.

Because God isn't finished with you yet.

Trust me. The world needs you.
